ANZ grants scholarships worth US$40,000 to FPT University students

In a ceremony at FPT University in Hanoi today, ANZ Vietnam (Limited) signed an agreement with FPT University for ANZ to grant scholarships of US$2,500 (approximately 50 million VND) to 16 FPT University students. This total commitment of US$40,000 underpins ANZ's dedication to the education of students in Vietnam, and its investment in building the banking and finance industry through developing talented people.

The ANZ scholarship will be awarded to four students each year, over four years, starting later this year. The students will be selected based on their academic performance and career goals, and the work they would be suited to as part of ANZ business. The scholarships will be awarded to students at either FPT University's Hanoi or Ho Chi Minh City campuses.

Speaking at the signing ceremony, Mr Vu Minh Truong, Head of Institutional, Greater Mekong Region, ANZ Vietnam said: "At ANZ, one of our key priorities is to support the growing number of talented people studying in Vietnam. We believe FPT University students will follow FPT Group's traditions to be pioneers and leaders in new technologies and knowledge, and be active, creative and professionals in Vietnam's future."

In addition to the scholarship program, ANZ and FPT University are working together to recruit FPT University banking and finance students for internships at ANZ for an on-the-job training program, which will run over eight months to one year.

In this program, FPT students will work with ANZ after their second year of study to experience a real, corporate working environment. They will then return to university for their final year, applying what they have learned to their further management training studies before they graduate.

To help the students make the most out of their work experience with ANZ, ANZ will provide opportunities for the students to join seminars and events across a variety of areas, including ANZ's culture, and specialised banking processes. Students will also have discussions about potential future opportunities at ANZ.

FPT University's representative, Mr Nguyen Xuan Phong, Vice Rector said: "FPT University is committed to working closely with ANZ to select the most suitable students for the scholarships. We are very supportive of our students learning about the corporate world, and giving them clear career path development in order to find a suitable job after graduation.”

Recently, besides companies that belong to FPT Corporation, FPT University also actively cooperates with many other organizations to provide students with more opportunities to develop strong careers after graduation. By signing the cooperation agreement with ANZ, FPT University hopes to bring more career choices to its students. In turn, ANZ hopes to tap into more of Vietnam’s talented students to be part of a growing banking and finance industry that is moving from strength to strength.
